

Sino-Soviet Split: The Other Cold War

a public lecture by

Prof. Lorenz Lüthi, McGill University

The Sino-Soviet Split was one of the most momentous events in the Cold War. Its consequences reverberated throughout the world – the Socialist World, South Asia, the Afro-Asian World, and even the West.

Lorenz Lüthi is Associate Professor for the History of International Relations at McGill University in Montreal/Canada. His first book was about the Sino-Soviet Split (2008). He is currently finishing another book, entitled Cold Wars: Asia, the Middle East, Europe, which is a general reinterpretation of the Cold War from the perspective of the middle and smaller powers.
